In its continuing effort to provide quality education through responsive research and instruction, faculty members attended several seminars, trainings and workshops that aim to update and enhance best practices in their field of specialization. Faculty members must be equipped with the latest trends and challenges in their respective fields. This can be possible by continuous capacity building by attending conferences, seminars, trainings and workshops. Through attending seminars and trainings, faculty members were able to re-tool competencies needed in advancing teaching methodologies and paradigm that would help in producing morally upright and globally competitive students.

Students are required to complete at least one research before earning their degrees. They are encouraged to conduct researches that may create impact not only to students of the institution but also to the fund of general knowledge. Bachelor of Science in Information Technology students on the other hand, are engaged in hardware and software development as an alternative tool or solution. Likewise, students are tapped to dwell on current and relevant topics and worked within the University Research Trust. They are trained to do both quantitative and qualitative approaches.
